U OF M SCIENCE CAFÉ CHALLENGE

April 15 @ Conor O'Neill's Pub, 318 S. Main, Ann Arbor

Hors d'oeuvres at 5:30 pm; program 6:00-7:30 pm

How can we get a sense of the greenhouse gas emissions and the energy used by different food sources and food systems? Is it possible for local "food movement" leaders to influence or change our overall food systems to reduce the environmental impact of our food?

Speakers will include Marty Heller of the U-M Center for Sustainable Systems, and Lesli Hoey of the U-M Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning.

The Challenge: Attend the event and register your attendance.

Why it Matters: In order to make good decisions about our own eating, to help others learn about the relationship between food and climate change and to decide where to put our efforts toward policy change, we need scientific information from experts.

What You Can Do: Attend this fun, educational event, join the conversation with the panelists and then use the information gained in your daily life.
